

Untrusted Neverland AU

Jane decided to stay in Neverland because she thought it was a better choice during the time of war, after an argument with her mother Wendy and she was supposed to be taken away to an orphanage to keep the kids safe during the war, but she refused. As time passes, she forgets that she had to take care of her family and his little brother, joins the “gang” of the lost boys, becomes a mother figure, and takes care of them.

When Peter got to know her better, he caught feelings (or crushing??), and then Jane got the same feelings as him. They spent together more and more until they got too attached, trusting more, and loving each other.

Ares knowing Hook and Peter hated each other, wanted to join the pirates so he could hunt them down together. The pirates got heavily confused by his look-a-like to Peter, but he reached out to them to clear them up who was he and wanted to join, they accepted Ares as a shipmate and worked together and Hook developed a close friendship with Ares. As Ares stays on the ship, he was the most respected like he was a king or the best shipmate ever. Smee got more rejected by the rest of them and bullies him more often than before. Sometimes Hook forgets that Smee is his helper. With Ares staying on Hook’s side, it helped being his therapist to Hook to talk about his PTSD but, he was faking all this close relationship only for revealing his weakness and for playing around with his trust. One day he strikes in to trigger his discomforts badly by clocks and crocodiles, by his backstory. (PTSD: almost got eaten by a crocodile and lost his most beloved clock.) Ares reveals that he was using, playing with his emotions, and emotionally damaging. Before Ares leaves the ship, he deeply bites Hook’s left torso leaving a permanent huge bite scar and loss of most skin. Ares left the ship and made Hook hate Peter more than before.

Hook ended up having trust issues, stress, anxiety, and more trauma.

After this, this is when Ares strikes from nowhere and takes over Peter’s absence and knowing everything since Jane came.

Every time Peter leaves, Ares shapeshifts as him to slowly hurt the lost boys starting as simple insults and then telling them it was a joke. He slowly turns these “jokes” worse, making their self-esteem bad, losing motivation to do their daily lives, and feeling uncomfortable around him. Peter comes back and gets complains about insulting them, arguing, and asking why. Peter has no idea what they were talking about and gets blamed and gets called the “innocent”. They didn’t believe him.

Things aren’t going very well for the lost boys and Jane. She suddenly remembered about her family and wanted to get back to the real world and Ares shapeshifted as Peter forces her to stay how much long he wants or can so Ares can plan to hurt her. This made Jane bitter and depressed. The skunk kid from the lost boys reminded her of his little brother and creates a bonding sibling relationship to cope and to remember there’s a family.

While Peter is gone, Ares shapeshifts as Peter, hurting them (Punching, scratching, banging them on the walls, saying horrible things like threats or insulting, etc.) and almost kills Tootles since Jane finds comfort around him. Ares left, leaving Peter the rest. Jane got afraid and terrified, blaming Peter, and again like last time, he was confused and overwhelmed when he saw the kids hurt. They all kicked him from their place by the damage “he” made.

Peter flew away from the place to find somewhere to be alone and wonders why they always blame him, and they don’t listen or understand. Tinker bell was looking for him to talk about it until she finds “Peter” by bumping each other. She told everything that she saw with his behavior and acting out of place and not being himself. Tinker bell was right, and Ares reveals himself to be a shapeshifter and he was in control of all of this. He forcefully had to eat her to make things worse, leave them without fairy dust, and to not make them easier to solve the issue since she’s a gossip.

Peter noticed the disappearance of Tinker Bell and then decides to look around, avoiding their place because he got kicked out. Wandering around, Peter accidentally bumped into Ares in the middle of the way. Peter got shocked and terrified of his look-a-like and never seen before in Neverland. Ares reveals to be the one behind the situation Peter’s been dealing with the lost boys and Jane and the reason why Tinker Bell was gone. Peter asks at him why he’s doing this and why Ares wants to destroy him badly.

Ares gets to manipulate and blames him for everything “he” has made, saying that it was his fault, only cares about himself, disgusting, abusive, ruins everything, toxic, etc. to make Peter feel down and Peter, accepted the blames since he was involved to it and got blamed by Jane.

Peter ended up depressed, alone, sad, stressed, and in rage. His thoughts got dark, negative, he lost trust, faith, hope, and low self-esteem, and blamed himself for everything into suicidal thoughts, and attempts to kill himself with self-harm.

He had nowhere to go, he couldn't eat properly, lonely, and often isolated himself in the dark from everyone until he found Hook's ship. He went to the ship so he can stay there, already knowing the shipmates are going to hurt him and it was his only option. He got the chance to talk with Hook and with Smee and they got frightened and confused because Peter has never done self-harm, and he originally wasn't this type of person. Peter wanted to vent with Hook about Ares messing all over him and surprisingly, he was familiar with Ares because he also manipulated him. They vented to each other and gave him the option to confess to them that Peter is innocent, what's happening behind everything, and to talk about Ares. Peter was already down, having mental breakdowns, and burnt down so he wanted to stay on the ship to rest and whenever he feels ready, Hook and Smee will root and take care of him.

One day, Peter felt ready to talk to Jane and to the lost boys giving him another chance to talk to them. He went to the land, running and finding their place, and spots a path of blood and coins and immediately recognized it was a trap to hurt someone. He found Tootles dead, covered in blood, and Peter was shocked and terrified that one of the lost boys died and knew it was Ares. He gently picks him up and is already covered in blood, Jane immediately finds him and calls him names like "monster" because she thought Peter murdered his comfort kid. Jane attacked him to defend herself and not giving him a chance to talk, runs away leaving the body where he saw.

While running away back to the ship, Peter's mood got worse, crying, and covers his ears to not hear Jane's pain. He got hurt and in rage was attacked and misunderstood by his loved one, Jane. When he came back to the ship, Peter told Hook it was unsuccessful and worsened more by Tootles death and Jane blaming him more. She even called him a monster and punched Peter in the face by the rage and sadness she's covered. Hook planned to reveal the truth together with clues and evidence of the existing look a like who's really taking over them and to prove Peter is innocent. Peter had to stay on the ship to heal himself to be ready.
